

FARM DAIRY AND HOUSEHOLD.

Preparations for Winter.

There is no service that the farmer performs that has a greater bearing upon his prosperity than the preparation that he makes for winter; a preparation that affects not only his own convenience and comfort, but the comfort and welfare of all the animals that are subject to his care. So far as his own necessities are concerned, provision should be made for the supply of all fruits and vegetables that grow upon the farm. A part of this service devolves upon the good housewife, who sees to the proper canning of that class of both fruits and vegetables that are of such a perishable nature as to be unable to withstand the destroying effects of time, she also attends to the manufacture of preserves and jellies, that serve so important a service in the household economy. In all that comes from the farm there should be ample provision made for home use, and that demand should never be restricted.

Green vegetables and fruits of a less perishable nature should be stored in the cellar where easily accessible at all times. Just at this time when the farmer should also make provision for his farm for the salt meat necessary for family requirements.

The fuel supply comes in as an important factor in the matter of home comfort. If possible this supply should be so ample that it is at all times secured a year in advance so that, at all times, the demand may be supplied from a pile of thoroughly seasoned wood. Provision should also be made for kindling; very often shavings may be procured from a carpenter's shop who is glad to give them away for the removal. If they are not obtainable in that way dry wood may be split very fine to serve the purpose. Late fall or early winter is the time to cut wood so that it may be hauled and prepared for burning leisurely during the winter.

Manure that is scattered over the cowyard should be gathered, carted and spread upon permanent mowing lands. It is surprising how easily a field can be maintained in a good state of fertility by a very light top dressing from year to year.

Provision should also be made in all that is necessary to secure the greatest comfort to animals. All stables should be made securely warm, but, at the same time, the ventilation should be good, or else the health of the animals is jeopardized; not only this, but there should be a supply of bedding, and if the stock of straw is not likely to be sufficient the want should be supplied by gathering forest leaves. Animals enjoy a good supply of bedding. Leaves are especially adapted for bedding for hogs, and wherever used they form a valuable addition to the manure supply.

Before the ground is frozen a supply of sand or dry loam should be secured for sand baths for fowls during the winter.

Tools should all be collected and housed for overhauling and repair when other work is impossible. All of these matters require attention preparatory to winter.

Hints for the Household.

Salt and water clean willow furniture.

For scraping kettles a large clam shell is excellent.

To save table scrubbing have your dish table covered with zinc.

Clean stoves when cold with any stove polish mixed with alum water.

The foot of a coarse cotton stocking is superior to a sponge for bathing purposes.

Fry some apples occasionally. Fried apples will remove the edge from many a hard meal.

New tins should be set over the fire with boiling water in them for several hours before food is put into them.

Lemon juice and sugar, mixed very thick, is useful to relieve coughs and sore throats. It must be very acid as well as sweet.

Spots may be taken from gilding by immersing the article in a solution of alum in pure soft water. Dry with sand.

A little borax added to the water in which scarlet napkins and red bordered towels are washed will prevent them from fading.

Plaster busts may be cleaned by dipping them into thick liquid cold starch—clear starch mixed with cold water—and brushing them when dry.

The latest wrinkle for luncheon in New York is to serve the soup in cups instead of plates, and the china stores are selling two handed cups for that purpose.

Plaster of paris mixed with water about like paste is good for closing cracks in stove ovens, firebricks, old coal scuttles, water pots and a great many other things.

When the nose threatens to bleed excessively, it can sometimes be arrested by putting the feet into hot water, or by applying a mustard plaster between the shoulders.

For making hair oil that is not injurious to the hair: Castor oil, 1 pint, 95 per cent. alcohol, 1 pint, tincture cantharides, 1 ounce, oil of bergamot, 2 drachms. Color the mixture a pale pink with alkanet root.

The bottom of an old keg or butter firkin makes a good mat to set your kettle on. Have one or two hanging near the dish table. Make a hole and put a string through to hang it by.

Finger marks may be removed from varnish furniture by the use of a little sweet oil upon a soft rag. Patient rubbing with chloroform will remove paint from black silk or any other material.
